Club News:

Rotary Kidman Park

From Co-President: Ron Harris

A slightly disappointing turnout for first Committee meetings, but as usual there are many away chasing the sun at this time. Those who did attend enjoyed a very good meal and there was plenty of active discussion towards plans and projects for the year ahead.
The new entry to Westward Ho is impressive, with substantial improvement to lighting in the area.

Ron

From Fellowship Committee:

The Fellowship Committee are keen to kick off the new Rotary year with a function during August. Details are being finalised and hopefully there will be an announcement in the next Bulletin.

FREE STUFF - Solar panels @ BOOKMART

It has been a long process but perseverance has prevailed and this month the City of Charles Sturt have approved a 'Discretionary Ward Allowance' to subsidise the installation of a 6.6kw solar panel system at the Rotary Bookmart. The CCS have approved the maximum grant of $3,000. I have a couple of quotes from reputable installers for around $4,100, which means the Bookmart only has to kick-in $1,100. Our annual electricity bill is around $1,400 so the payback period is only 9 months. After that our electricity will be mostly free which means an extra profit of $7000 plus over the next 5 years.

What's next

Once we have "almost free" electricity we can install 2 reverse cycle split air conditioners and close our gas account. The 2 gas heaters cost about $2,000 per year so if we invest $6,600 on 2 x 8.5kw split air conditioners instead of paying for gas then the break even period is just 3.2 years and we can increase our profit by a further $10,000 every 5 years after that. The combined total extra profit per 5 years period will be around $17,000.
This plan and reduction in our carbon footprint is aligned perfectly with the council's policy on climate change.

ROTARY BOOKMART

District grant for Bookmart Defibrillator

Initially our application for the District to pay for 50% ($1,480) of the defib at Bookmart was declined, however it was approved later but they forgot to tell us. All fixed now and the money is in the bank. Bendigo Bank paid for the other half.

District Grant Applications close mid August.

Please discuss ideas with your committees so we can put forward any applications. We have over $40,000 that needs to be matched to a grant.

Defib letterbox drop awareness campaign.

If you have leaflets leftover from the Bookmart letterbox drop then please leave them in the Bookmart office or mail box attached to the southern entrance door at Bookmart.
Next week I will bring new leaflets and maps to letterbox drop at West Beach for awareness for the WBSLSC defibrillator.

Rotary International News

Rotary Kidman Park

At last week's Committee's meetings Treasurer Rob Chambers suggested that the Committees should be looking for projects that might be suitable for a Rotary Foundation Grant, with applications closing in August.

The following article is reproduced from Rotary International / Rotary Leader publication July 2024

10 tips to inspire partners to work with you on a service initiative

- Commit to bold ideas.
  Find ambitious approaches that address the underlying cause of an issue. Sustainable solutions will pique the interest of those outside Rotary who care about solving the same problem. Share those ideas with potential partners. The challenge often isn't money as much as a failure to inspire partners with our solutions. Bold ideas that will create lasting, positive change will motivate partners to work with us.
- Develop your idea with Rotary expertise and project tools.
  As you develop (or later implement) your bold idea, remember that you don't have to do it alone.
- Prove your concept.
  Start with a small project and local donors and collect data that shows your approach is effective. With this proof, you can develop solutions to serve more people and attract larger donors. Involve your government and emphasize how the project will help members in specific communities. Suggested mindset: "We'll do this even if you don't give us funding — but if you do, we'll make this impact much faster.
- "Use your Rotary network to identify potential partners.
  Attend district and club-led events, interclub assemblies, the Rotary International Convention, project fairs, and other activities. You can also ask members whether other professional networks or organizations they're part of might be excited about your bold solution.
- Keep building your network outside Rotary.
  Look beyond Rotary. Who else in your community is working to address similar issues? Connect with them! Seek introductions to people in your professional and social networks who care about the communities your project or program will serve. As you work with trusted partners, ask who else they collaborate with. This helps you build your network of potential partners. Approach financial commitments the same way: When you have one initial commitment or match, use that to approach other partners.

10 tips to inspire partners to work with you on a service initiative (continued)

- Identify potential partners whose goals align with yours.
  Find out what local governments and communities say their needs are and notice which groups are doing meaningful work and have programs that implement solutions. Learn about their goals and determine if they align with your own. Partners

- Emphasize that Rotary is "local" around the world.
  Rotary's impact is based on collective action. Tell potential partners that collaborating with Rotary means having the ability to activate our "local" global presence and commitment to service. Our network of people engaged in making a difference and experienced in convening diverse local leaders means that partners can work with people who are committed to and capable of implementing sustainable, community-led solutions.

- Remember that potential partners are looking for good ideas.
  Companies, family foundations, government agencies, and other potential partners are seeking opportunities to use their financial resources to do good in the world. They are looking for solutions that would make their investment worthwhile. Rotary members can offer them bold ideas with well-planned, locally led programs they can be part of. Invite them to join you in creating lasting, positive change.

- Consider rejection as an opportunity.
  Don't be discouraged if potential partners say no. Ask for feedback! Provide more information to clarify any misunderstandings. They might prefer a different scope, approach, or target area than you planned on. Consider whether you can adjust your proposal to incorporate their interests while working toward the goals you have in common or if you can connect them with another Rotary group that's more aligned with them.

- Accept that building a partnership requires time.
  Partnerships are built over time and by maintaining relationships. Panelists shared how they solidified the trust necessary for long-term commitments: starting with unfunded collaborations, working on smaller projects with less funding, and staying in contact through project updates or holiday greetings. It may take more time than you expected to build the relationship, but the trust and understanding that develop makes the partnership more likely to be successful.
